Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from United Australia, One People One Destiny, Vol. 2: Oct; 25, 1901 The simultaneous criticism of Australian affairs by two well-established Scotch journals of repute and recognised ability should attract some attention among the steadier type of Australian citizens. The communication recently published in London from The Times New Zealand correspondent, in regard to that colony's finance, has called forth leading articles from The Scotsman and The Aherdeen Free Press. They contain decidedly wholesome and sober reading; and it is to be hoped that they will be carefully studied by every level-headed Scot in that advanced cominimity at which they are more directly aimed. Many thoughtful people, says the article in The Scotsman, have expected some such news. The news referred to was to the effect that The N.Z. Treasury is depleted, and the Government are borrowing small sums locally at four percent. The Scotsman is, perhaps, unaware that what it terms thoughtful people do not count for much in these go-ahead young communities, where every political idea must be brand new to receive a widespread consideration; where anyone who expresses any opinions that were considered sound fifty years ago is treated as a fossil, and spoken of as if he were a Kip and Winkle who had been asleep during the last half century. People of steady temperament who have not followed wherever the political novice would have them go, and who have not assented to every wind of doctrine that blows over the political world of that self-satisfied colony, such people have almost given up trying to take a part in its law-making, for the simple reason that they find themselves quite unable...
