Flux, as used in this report, is the volumetric rate of flow per unit area entering or leaving the cross section. Physical dimensions of the cross section were determined from well logs, aerial photographs, and transit-stadia surveys. The model grid consisted of 7 layers, 1 row, and 43 columns (fig. 16). Model layers were designed to approximate the extent and occurrence of sand and clay layers in the alluvial aquifer. Distribution of K_h was estimated on the basis of slug-test results and was modified slightly during model calibration. Distribution of K , and storage coefficients for some layers were estimated during calibration. Specified flux-boundary conditions were used and included the special case of no flow (fig. 16). No-flow boundaries were specified for the lower and...
