He was as ardent a patriot as he was an excellent mechanic, and as fearless a post-rider for the leaders of the Revolution as he was a good soldier, bearing a commission as lieutenant from Governor William Shirley, under which commission he served His Majesty King George II. on an expedition against the French at Crown Point. He was a man of many resources; and, as his biographer aptly puts it, he was an artificer of many trades, who was relied upon by the leading patriots for valuable services in the times that tried mens s souls.
